During the Pulse Candlelight Vigil At Dr. Phillips Performing Arts tonight, each victim's name was called out into the crowd, a deafening silence during each pause, painful sobs escaping on occasion, muffled in the distance. We had a moment of silence. I'm sure everyone noticed the birds fluttering overhead - after all, they were everywhere. I certainly noticed the birds. As everyone bowed their heads to pay their respects, I snapped a photo of the birds, thinking that there seemed to be an awful lot of them. There were 49 birds, my friends. The fallen were with us, tonight. #orlandostrong #prayfororlando #united #onepulse #pulseorlando #lgbt — with Kenzie Carolan and 4 others.

You are handling things very well in terms of TV, your presence, laying out the facts, setting a context for the briefings, all of it you are doing well. One thing to mention if you have interest. I know that Erin Burnett and her team from CNN are on the ground. I have always had good, fair and sane interviews with her. I know her producer, so if you have any interest in being on her show, I can send you her producer's name/number, and you can go from there. Just let me know. God Bless

Awesome on it!

Ok awesome team OneOrlando coming together and we will be able -- I think -- to say mayor can announce at tonight's vigil. Microsoft is hosting the site for us. More later.
Hello my loves! We must have a city council soon - a few things we have to address. Suggest Monday at 2 we could give notice tomorrow and limit agenda to consent only. We would have to take public comment on agenda items only. Kathy Scanlon says mayor can do Monday. Rebecca's event at 3 anyway. Thoughts.

Watching from afar feels weird with a crisis of this magnitude. From a national POV, you are doing amazing - lending a steady hand but not politicizing. Coverage and social media is spot on from your role. You are a strong leader and I'm proud of you and the team. While I wouldn't say 'these are the days we live for' I'm not sure what else to say.
