BEWES Audit or Retro-Commissioning Requirement

Starting in 2020, the owner of a covered property that receives an ENERGY STAR score under 50, or equivalent EUI, is required to perform an energy audit, or a retro-commissioning (RCx), and shall file a summary audit or retro-commissioning report for such property no later than May 2025, and then once every five years thereafter (section 15.08)

The following section summarizes the 2020 energy audits and retro-commissioning completed and resulting trends and recommendations from the corresponding reports submitted.

Trends and Recommendations

Overall Trends

In total, audits or retro-commissioning were completed for 38 buildings, distributed across the following levels of complexity:

- ASHRAE Level I or Utility-Grade Audit: 31 buildings
- ASHRAE Level II Audit: 2 buildings
- Retro-Commissioning: 5 buildings

Figure 1: This figure highlights the frequency of audit and retro-commissioning recommendations. Other signifies recommendations that may include other energy-saving techniques (e.g., water temperature) or nuanced suggestions derived from ASHRAE Level II or RCx reports.

Based on the audit summaries received, the most common recommendations included upgrades to lighting and cooling systems, with the most numerous individual recommended actions focused on appliance improvements, as shown in Figure 1. Frequent suggestions included installing occupancy sensors, adjusting temperature settings during unoccupied hours, lowering water temperatures to save energy, and appliance recommendations included upgrading exit signs to LEDs and adding vending machine controls. Meanwhile, in the retro-commissioning reports, switching all interior lights to LEDs was the top recommendation.

Recommendations by Building Type

Audits or retro-commissioning were completed according to the frequencies, across each of these building types (note that the following lists only highlight those types with the highest frequencies. The figure below provides a useful insight regarding all building types considered):

- Office
- Hotel
- Distribution Center
- Non-refrigerated warehouse
- College/University

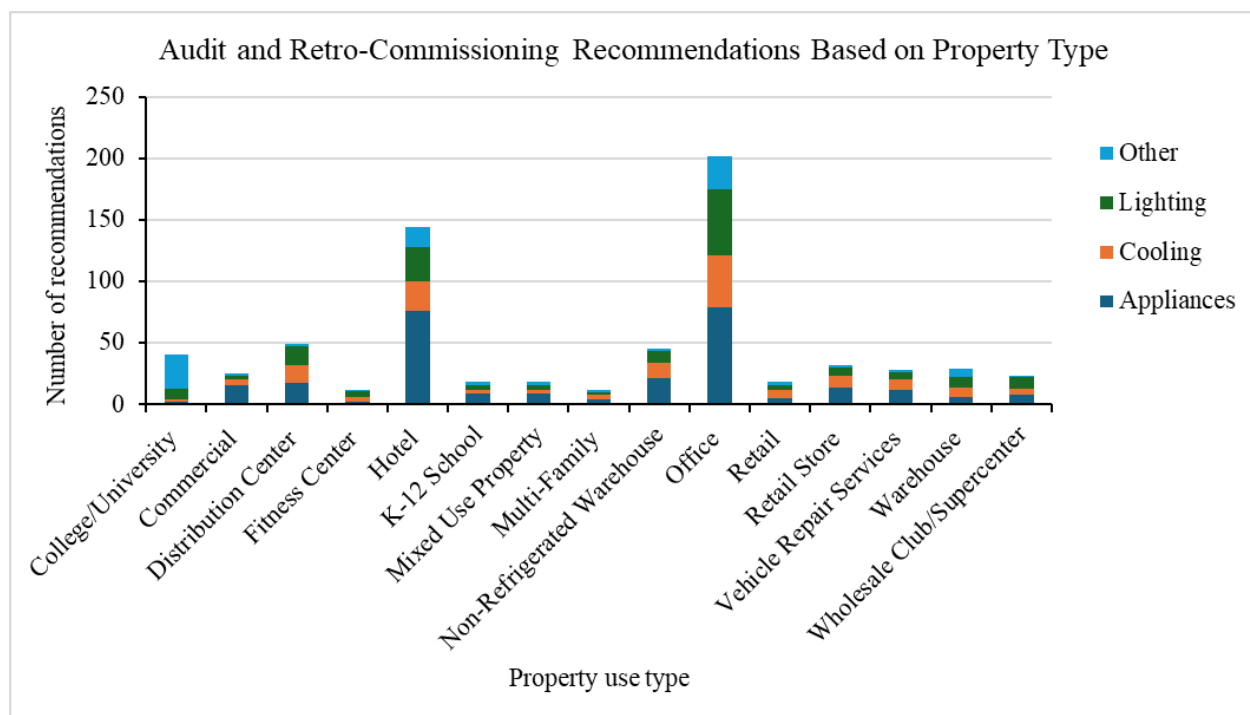

Figure 2: This figure highlights the frequency of audit and retro-commissioning recommendations per building type. Other signifies recommendations that may include other energy-saving techniques (e.g., water temperature) or nuanced suggestions derived from ASHRAE Level II or RCx reports.

When analyzing recommendations by building type, hotels and offices received suggestions for appliance, lighting, and cooling upgrades. This trend is likely influenced by both the number of properties within these categories and their overall building size. For instance, a 70,000-square-foot hotel with 200 rooms may have numerous individual appliances such as stoves and microwaves, increasing its energy demands. Recommendations for warehouses primarily focused on cooling and lighting improvements, while colleges and universities emphasized enhancements to cooling systems. For non-refrigerated warehouses, both cooling and appliance upgrades were prioritized, as shown in Figure 2.
